

Writing to the Needs of Women

Navigating Divides with Truth, Wisdom, and Love

Linda Evans Shepherd

Conference Handout

Key insights, discussion points, and writing prompts based on Linda's workshop.

Understanding Today's Woman

- Today's women are navigating a world that is louder, faster, and more confusing than ever before.
- Many women are searching for peace, purpose, identity, and authentic connection.
- Cultural messages often encourage self-definition, independence, and distrust of institutions.
- Behind many strong exteriors are fears of loneliness, failure, burnout, and losing identity.

What Women Are Really Looking For

- Peace that lasts
- A stable identity
- Safe connection and belonging
- Hope that acknowledges real struggle
- Practical wisdom for everyday life

What Doesn't Work

- Leading with correction
- Arguing before listening
- Trying to 'fix' people too quickly
- Dismissing fears or emotional struggles

What Builds Connection

- Listening before teaching
- Respecting her strength and story
- Creating judgment-free conversations
- Sharing truth through relationship
- Offering invitation instead of pressure

Conversation Openers

- "You've built a lot on your own—that's not easy."
- "What's been the hardest part lately?"
- "What do you do when life feels overwhelming?"
- "Can I tell you something that helped me?"

Topics Women Are Drawn To

- Anxiety and overthinking
- Loneliness and isolation
- Identity and self-worth
- Burnout and emotional exhaustion
- Parenting stress
- Relationships and healing
- Purpose and direction

Writing Topics That Connect

- Devotionals
- Personal testimony
- Christian fiction
- Bible studies
- Parenting encouragement
- Podcasts and videos
- Magazine articles
- Inspirational social media content

Upcoming Trends to Watch

- Mental health conversations
- Digital overload and AI confusion
- Loneliness epidemic
- Search for simplicity and peace
- Identity confusion
- Burnout becoming normalized
- Desire for authentic community

Key Takeaway

- Women often read what names their pain before they read what corrects their beliefs.
- Connection opens the door—truth walks through it.
- As Christian writers, we are not just informing women—we are guiding them home.

Workshop Reflection Questions

1. What emotional struggles do women around me most commonly face?
2. What topics naturally connect with my audience?
3. How can I write with more compassion and understanding?
4. What personal story has God used to shape my message?
5. What is one article, devotional, talk, or story idea I can begin this week?

Your Story Framework

- I had a problem...

- God (or truth/faith/community) met me there...
- Here's what changed...
- Here's what I want others to know...

Notes
