

Name: Deborah Pidcock

One sentence that describes me and my writing: Through faith, loss, and hope, I discovered a calling to help children flourish by writing stories that reveal God's love, presence, and purpose for their lives.

Brief bio: Widowed at a young age, I was entrusted with the privilege of raising four children—including one through adoption. Through both the joys and challenges of that journey, God deepened my faith and gave me a special burden for children who grow up without the presence of an earthly father. That transformation has shaped a deep desire in me to help children understand their worth and to see themselves as the Lord created them to be. Something else that has inspired my writing is how I once allowed shame and self-criticism to take root in my life, and how the Lord has been transforming me. That transformation has shaped a deep desire in me to help children understand their worth and to see themselves as the Lord created them to be.

Why I write: I have a passion for helping children discover the freedom and security that they, like all of us, long for.

I write:

Fiction: ☒ short stories ☒ books Genres: Children's Fiction

Nonfiction: ☐ articles ☒ personal experience stories ☐ devotions ☐ books

Other: ☐ poetry ☐ scripts

Genre: Children's spiritual development

My audience ☒ Christians ☒ general public ☐ women ☐ men ☐ teens ☒ children

I'm currently working on: I am currently writing two children's books. The first helps children understand God as their ever-present Father. The second empowers children to recognize their worth and overcome shame.

My greatest joy and/or struggle in writing is:

Finding ways to encourage children is one of my greatest joys.
